How do we work?

- In this age, our role is to work with them as a mentor and guide. We teach the child how to take decisions, the pros and cons of it and how it impacts their own and the life of others around them. This teaches them mindful and intentional decision – making skills.
- This is where the challenging concepts are introduced, which make them question everything they have learnt till now.
- This is where we teach them how to hold questions and how to reach their answers on their own. This is where we work with them to help them become independent learners.
- As they get introduced to topics atoms, molecules it brings the conversation about the universe as a whole and what is the role of every particle.

- This is where they learn how they are a small particle of it, and how they exist as a complete ecosystem and how even as an individual, they are dependent on others and how others are dependent on them.
- This teaches them about impact, their responsibilities and how much their life holds importance.
- This builds a sense of empathy in them when they learn how their existence and even being able to make choices today are a work of someone else. How they are connected to everything and how everything is within them. Every answer and every path.
- This helps them make mindful choices and decisions and how they want to lead and build their life as an adult.
- The strong foundation that was built during their 7-14 years now helps them to dive deep into the subjects, question what they are studying and learn to build a belief system about the world.
- This is where critical thinking comes into full force where they start questioning the society, how everything works.
- This is how they learn to make a choice in how they want to make an impact in the world. Their thoughts become specific, they have a clear sense of identity, they learn to gain morality and ethics.
- Everything they have learnt, created, and imagined becomes meaningful. Their skillset now has a purpose and sense of direction.
- Now they are capable of choosing any career path, as their basics are strong and understand the importance of each work and what building a career truly means. They will have answers and a pathway to find the answers of existential crisis.
- They know how to sit with a problem and how to reach to the answer through the process that they have learnt in the past.
- This is when they see that why it was so important for them to build their individuality during earlier years as it gets questioned in this very curriculum.
- Our job doesn't end here where they have figured out their career path. Career is a start pointing, which leads to many different changes in the trajectory of their life.
This age is the beginning of the changes in relationship they have with their parents, friends and others as life doesn't just test their confidence and gives consequences of past, it also tests the strength of relationships they have built.
They learn to let go of relationships which do not align with them, who stayed, who supports them in their hardest time and who they can trust.

Our work is to make sure that you as a parent are on their good side because often times when children lose trust of their parents, they trust the person who listens to their doubts and suggests that you might be the reason of their doubts.

Academic skills acquired:

- Have deep understanding of subjects.
 - Clarity on competitive exam preparations.

What is your role in this as a parent?

- The most important role as a parent you have here is to become available to listen to them. They should feel comfortable to come and talk about anything to you.
 - At this age, life is already making them feel accountable for everything, your words might add fire to it. This is why it is important for to know that you are with them in everything. They will be losing friends, going through emotional hurt because of actions of a relative or friend.
Make sure they can talk to you about it. Your goal here is to listen instead of telling them what they did was right or wrong.
 - As a parent when you feel like you want to tell them that they are wrong, start talking with why you feel they are wrong instead of giving it as a judgement. A very nice addition would be a story of your past which you experienced and that is making you give this judgement.
 - Do not be afraid to be vulnerable around your child. They are becoming adult and their brain is developed to understand complex emotions. You will be amazed by how good this can make you feel and they may even teach you a thing or two here.
Do not feel small in learning from them.

What will you see?

- Hobbies:
 - To build mind.
 - To self-express.
 - To keep them healthy.
 - Confident in talking to others.
 - Rooted in their self-worth and self-esteem.
 - Know how to build relationships that lasts.
 - Clarity on subjects and career they want to have.

- The child becomes an independent learner and capable of building their own healthy study routine.

This is why by the end of this program they become capable of handling responsibilities; become resilient and learn how to build healthy relationships. They understand about respect, become empathetic, know people around them, and their self-worth.

Q Why is our 7 – Year Program is recommended before moving towards taking this program to achieve the desired results?

At this age, the child feels exhausted and burns out because the academics and syllabus get escalated and heavy while also hugging the real world simultaneously. If their basics and foundation aren't strong and concrete, then they won't be able to navigate the real world and their academic learning efficiently.

This will push them more towards avoidance and distracting themselves. This will result in them consuming knowledge from social media rather than books. This can influence them towards following any path which may or may not turn out to be harmful for them but might have severe consequences.

Now your child is ready to take on life as an individual.
